October Photos

In this issue's photo gallery, a symposium explores aging in the era of technology, while a youngster teaches a traditional dance. A walk around campus helps charities, while a walk in the woods teaches youth about a cherished resource. If you would like to submit photos of timely activities for future issues, email pictures with a brief caption to proffice@oswego.edu.

New book explores reception of gospel hip-hop

A communication studies faculty member examines Christian rap and gospel hip-hop as an evolution of black liberation theology in his recently published book "Political Melodies in the Pews?: The Voice of the Black Christian Rapper in the Twenty-first Century Church." Read more >

Faculty choreographer, pianist celebrate Cage

Choreographer Cheryl Wilkins-Mitchell and pianist Rob Auler, both of Oswego's faculty, will provide a 100th birthday salute Saturday to composer John Cage, a provocative and inventive rebel who transformed modern music. Read more >

Oswego makes 2013 'Best Business Schools' list

The School of Business made Princeton Review's list of the nation's outstanding MBA-granting schools for the ninth consecutive year, with the publication citing a high level of student satisfaction, strong menu of academic offerings and flexible course delivery options. Read more >

Diversity increases as Oswego recruits in competitive market

Enrollment of freshmen and transfers in underrepresented groups continued a seven-year rise this fall, even as high admissions standards meant the total new students declined compared to last year. Read more >

People in Action

In this issue, read about an Oswego faculty member selected for a "distinguished" video, an Oswego faculty member keynoting a celebration in Minnesota, art shows by staff and students, organizers of a regional round of an international computing competition and more. Read more >
